

British Ambassador to France Launches Society

Lord Llewellyn, British Ambassador to France, launched the Society of the Wallace Fountains, its website and guidebook at a magnificent reception held in the blue room of his historic private residence on the evening of 22 October.

Lord Llewellyn gave an introduction about the fountains and the work of the Society. Guests, notable representatives from all the relevant French and British organizations and supporters of the Society and its work, enjoyed the hospitality of the Ambassador. A fun, 8-question, multiple choice quiz about the fountains was conducted, with prizes to the winners. It was followed by a brief presentation on the importance of preserving and protecting the famous Wallace Fountains of Paris. The very successful event accomplished its mission of gaining the support and cooperation of those in Paris who can advance the mission of La Société des Fontaines Wallace.
