

Square de Paris in Amman has a Wallace Fountain

Square de Paris Amman, JORDAN

Once called Water Tower Square because a water tower stood on the location, the area was rehabilitated in 2003 and renamed Square de Paris and known as Paris Circle. The circle has typical Parisian streetlights, a Morris column and a Wallace fountain located in the middle. It is near the French Institute of Jordan. The circle is located in the older part of the Jabal Al Lweibdeh neighborhood, a very popular and vibrant place for cafés, restaurants, shops and design studios. Square de Paris brings a little bit of the Paris streetscape to Amman.

If anyone has additional information about the history or origin of this fountain, please share it by contacting us at admin@wallacefountains.org.

