A Wallace Fountain can be found at the Inglenook Winery located in Rutherford, California. It is situated in a charming seating area overlooking the winery's extensive vineyards. The winery is located in California's famous Napa Valley wine producing district and is open to public visits.

The winery was established in 1879. In 1975, Francis Ford Coppola purchased a portion of the old estate and over the years reassembled all the land and historic building relating to the original Inglenook estate. Coppola is an American film director, producer, and screenwriter. He is considered one of the major figures of the New Hollywood filmmaking movement of the 1960s and 1970s. Coppola is the recipient of five Academy Awards, six Golden Globe Awards, two Palmes d'Or and a British Academy Film Award.

It was during his ownership that the fountain appeared at the winery. It was most likely purchased new, directly from the GHM foundry, and shipped to California for display at the winery.
